

Ever since Indiana put the privacy law into effect the soliciting phone calls have been cut down considerably. Before the law went into effect a night would not go by without some phone solicitation occurring. It became tedious and tiresome. We even had the experience of having the same company call three times in one evening. The calls were really annoying when they would occur on the weekends.

Do not change this law in any form. It works great just the way it is. We even signed my mother up so the phone calls would stop. She lives alone and has trouble getting around. The persistent phone solicitations were annoying for her.

Keep things the way they are. Don't mess with a good thing. Thank you.
